

To: Martin Willis

---

Good afternoon Martin.

Thank you again for having us on your show. It was good to link up with Jonathan in the process.

A few things I need to address. It's regarding the Vetted Podcast which interviewed Nathan Labrum. He was a team leader at one point. Not during the mission I was on. As I've stated in numerous emails that the sticks we were on were composed of Marines from different squads, Platoons etc. I was attached the ship as food service hence why we were split up abnormally.

The statements made during Nathan's interview which was speaking about me seeing aliens and the operation being at night were not things I've stated in any interview or podcast I've ever done including my testimony to Government agencies.

The inaccurate information they are providing is not anything that I've ever stated. Both of the gentlemen haven't seen any interview I've done in detail. Let alone the photo they provided was not me as well. 3 of us have proven it wasn't and we know the actual Marine they are trying to allege was me. As I've stated I will never release the other names of the other Marines who were with me due to them telling me not to and I do not want them subjected to the same treatments I have received from all avenues.

This is an attempt from someone who personally disliked me from the beginning and has learned of my successes as an entrepreneur over the years since I was the "lone wolf" or the guy who would never make it so to speak. There have been numerous people who've spoken to Nathan about the details of which he could not recall. I'm not bothered by this and I could care less on what others think and say. They don't know me personally and they have no impact on my life whatsoever, they aren't on a level I'm on or even close in life and the only people I value the opinions of are those in my circle. Thank you Martin once again.